Cantharone Plus Topical : Uses, Side Effects, Interactions ...

Cantharidin is a vesicant that causes a blister to form on the wart or growth. This action lifts the wart off the skin and after a few days when the blister has dried the wart will come off. The action of cantharidin does not go beyond the epidermal cells, the basal layer remains intact hence no scarring.

Cantharidin is an odorless, colorless fatty substance of the terpenoid class, which is secreted by many species of blister beetles. It is a burn agent or a poison in large doses, but preparations containing it were historically used as aphrodisiacs (Spanish fly). In its natural form, cantharidin is secreted by the male blister beetle and given to the female as a copulatory gift during mating.

Excerpt: ...reliance is based upon the vesicating power of the matter extracted, unless the quantity of cantharidin should be large enough to apply chemical tests, which is but seldom the case. Cantharidin may be extracted by shaking a liquid containing it, after rendering it strongly acid, with chloro form. The suspected urine is concentrated to one-fourth, rendered strongly acid by sulphuric acid, and then twice successively shaken with an equal volume of chloroform. The united chloroformic solutions are repeatedly shaken with water, then evaporated to dryness (or as far as possible), the residue heated with a little fixed oil of almonds, and a small piece of lint saturated with this oily solution applied to the breast covered with a little court-plaster. If notable traces of cantharidin were present, there will be more or less vesication. CAPSICU M. Capsicum is stimulant and irritant to the skin and mucous surfaces. Its local application causes pain, itching, and redness, and, if sufficiently prolonged, produces vesication. Phillips says that, applied to the skin, especially in a concentrated solution, capsicum is a powerful rubefacient, and will even blister, if applied continuously. Taken internally in large doses, it produces a general glow of the surface, sometimes an erythematous eruption. Allen states that teaspoonful doses of a solution of capsicum, taken at night, caused a papulo-vesicular eruption all over the body, with much burning and itching. CHLORAL. The effect of the topical application of hydrate of chloral is irritant, and if the skin be deprived of epidermis, it causes a sharp, burning pain. Cantani pointed out that its external application produces erythema and vesicles surrounded by capillary hyperaemia. More recently, Ritter...
